A Penny for Your Thoughts: dealing with relationships with true life situations & stories Penny Brown

When times are rough and you think you're going through it alone you are not. Many times we are going through things and dealing with people from a good perspective. We use our hearts. Unfortunately, not everyone is thinking as you are. In this story join Penny as she takes you into her world. I'm quite sure it's a world that many of us are very familiar with. See what she does to change this path in life. It will surprise you and replenish you all at the same time. Life isn't sugar coated. You don't have to be 'hood' to go through some stuff. But to make it out, is a mental you must learn to put into action and account for. Yet, there is still one question that remains to surpass me; Why are women today, specifically African American women - treated as modern day slaves? Not only by significant others, but by family, peers and within. Which makes this even sadder. When we step up - we're defined as strong, non submissive, or having an attitude. Unfortunately, people are going to be people. We may not ever see a day when hate does not exist. Only the strong and loved survive. It begins with loving yourself. God 1st! Going through struggles doesn't mean you're about that life...getting through that *ish means that. You can't help what you're born into or around. It's not even that. It's our own selfish decisions that puts us in a place. Everyone values their lives differently. One's wrong doesn't make the other right. And visa versa...
