Aurora Flynn is just one of many children that the Fallen angel, Lucifer, has created with unknowing humans. She lives with her sisters, also daughters of Lucifer. Their lives are fairly normal, save for some very non-human abilities and the curse of immortality. Her human father passed away from old age and it left Aurora adamant about not falling for a human. Humans die on you, that's what she has learned from her mother. If you don't love, you don't get hurt. Then she meets Hale Wyatt. A boy with a wicked glint in his eyes, scars all over his body, and the ability to give Aurora a headache in two minutes flat. From the second he spotted Aurora (Rory, as he calls her) he's been determined to befriend her. She has no clue why, and he doesn't take no for an answer. While trying to shake Hale from her life, she's met with a familiar face from her past. A girl named Dottie. Dottie's mother died in a car accident, the timing of which Aurora blames herself. And as it turns out, someone else might blame her too. A series of attacks befall Aurora and it's starting to put the rest of her family in danger, including the boy she is trying not to love. She needs to find out who wants to raze her world before they take everything she's been fighting for.
